Hi Cindy, How are you? I'll be arriving on the 10th of February, I think in the morning. Is it cold right now in Taiwan? Will it be cold in February? Thanks,

3. 接待心得(至少 300 字以上)

After exchanging our Instagram accounts, I invited Vanessa to the night market and helped her get settled in. I told her about the gym's opening hours and how to pay the entrance fee. I also helped her get familiar with the layout and interface of INCCU, as well as course selection. This part was quite interesting, since I had taken some EMI classes before, so I was able to give her some advice and recommendations!

As I mentioned, I originally planned to hang out with her at the night market. However, Vanessa forgot about it, so I changed my plans and gave her a small souvenir outside her classroom. We had a quick chat—so quick that we didn't even have time to take a photo! Hopefully, we'll get to talk more next time.

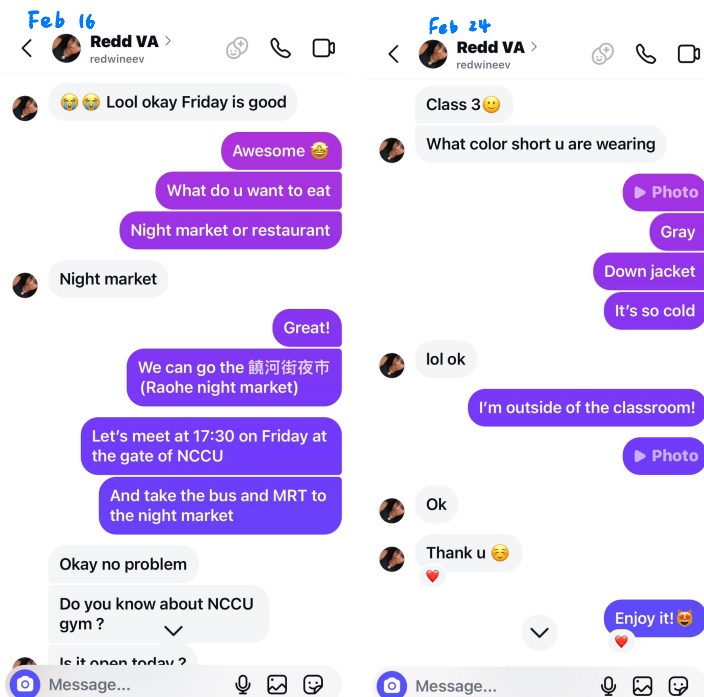

Around the Dragon Boat Festival, I tried to invite her to the night market again, but by that time, she had already returned to France.

Although I didn't get the chance to know Vanessa better, I was still glad to have met her that day outside her classroom. She was warm and kind! Also, being able to help her by answering questions about Taiwan made me feel like a real guide. It felt fulfilling to introduce places I know well to someone new! I also realized that I should improve my writing skills to have better conversations with her online.

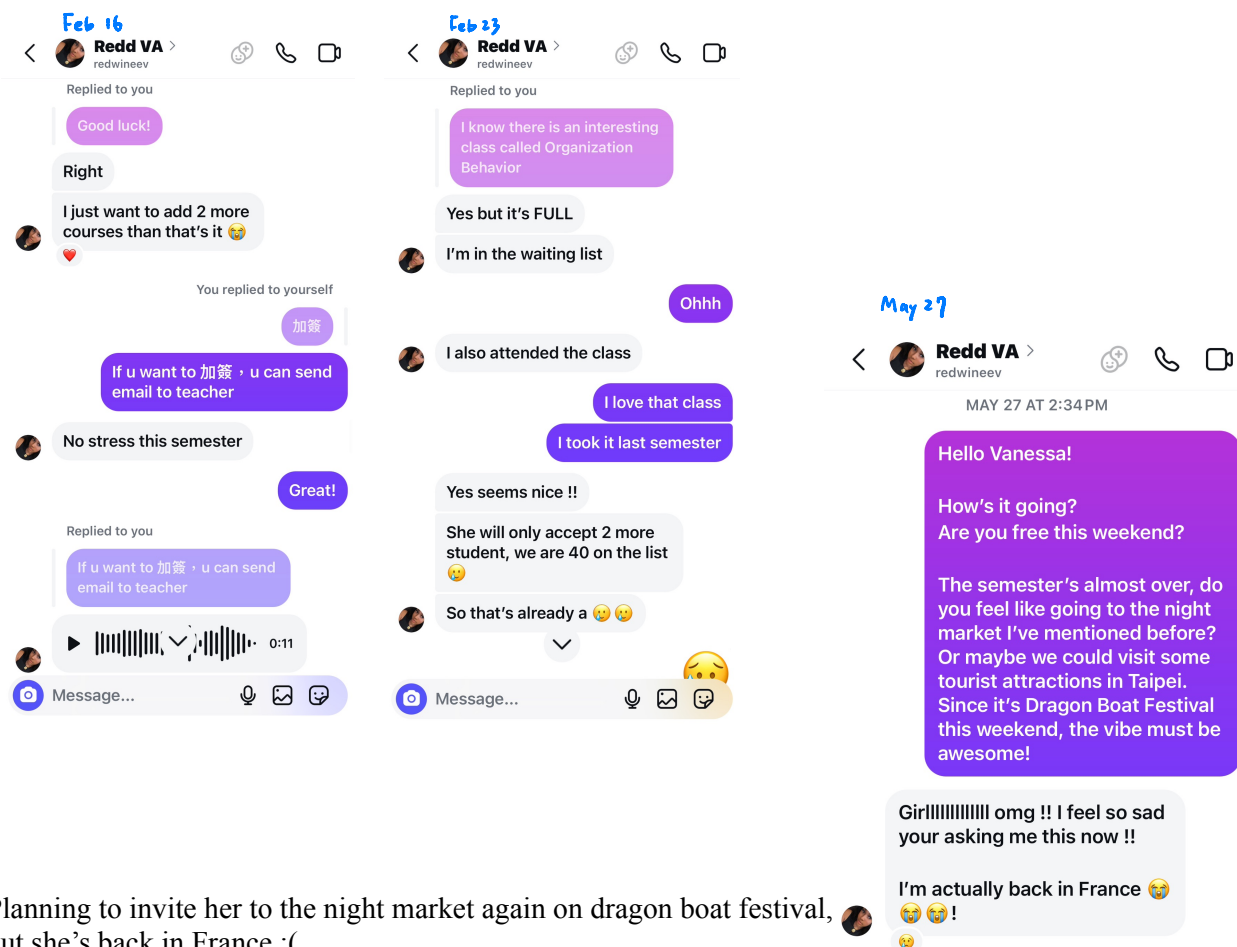

Through this experience, I realized that exchange students may face many challenges in daily life. If I have the chance to be a buddy again, I hope to have more in-person conversations and interactions, and become more familiar with giving useful advice to help them adjust more smoothly.
