Re: E-paper Volume 4

My time in India was pretty awesome so far and I decided to go to the North of India and see highlights like Taj Mahal and Varanasi with its Ganga river. To be honest I didn't enjoy any of the sights, because it was so touristic. Even when I found a peaceful place near the river bank to contemplate about life, immediately someone came offering me tour guide service, boat service, begged for money or just simply wanted to practice English. All together made realized that it was the last time in my life I came to this kind of places and from now on I will visit only natural resources without crowds everywhere around me.

It turned out that administration shifted examination period of two weeks, which made many exchange student really annoyed because everyone had to cancel their travelling arrangements and also rebook the tickets. PGP chairman had a feedback sessions with us and he didn't even bother to answer to any of the suggestions, questions and complaints like: lack of buddy program, no activities among locals and exchange students and not clear administrative procedures. Nevertheless the time in India was great experience and I am looking forward to come back, this time as a tourist, to visit Rajasthan, Himalaya and Kerala, where is not much of a white crowd.
